CENTER OF GERMAN FRONT IS CRUMPLED UP BY ALLIED ARMY

Franco-British Forces Deliver Crushing Blows Which Teutons Cannot Withstand and After Terrific Fighting On Both Sides, Troops of Kaiser Retire

LONDON, October 28.—(Associated Press by Federal Wireless)—Exultant reports of yesterday's fierce battling in Belgium and along the Marne section of the Allies' right have been received, in official statements from Paris and in the reports sent from the front by the press correspondents with the armies.

According to these despatches, the Crown Prince has been thrown back and the greater part of his army forced out of France, back on the line to Metz.

This leaves that section of the German force in the Vosges region in extreme danger of being cut off.

ALLIES PRESS ONWARD IN BELGIUM

In Belgium the Allies are gradually pressing northward and the reports received from Netherlands points of the activity of the Germans in hastening their defenses of Antwerp lead to the belief that a general retirement behind the prepared lines along the Sambre and circling Brussels is contemplated as a near possibility on the part of General von Kluck.

Reports agree that the fighting at Ypres, on the Yser, where the same positions were carried and retaken time after time at the point of the bayonet, has been the bloodiest of all the war. Here, for five days, a British force held back a quarter of a million Germans, among whom the slaughter was terrific, as they advanced again and again against the British trenches.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF OPERATIONS

An official statement of the situation, given out early in the day at Paris, says:

"Spirited fighting continues between the mouth of the Yser and Lens, northeast of Arras, France. Here the Allies have nowhere retired.

"Between Ypres and Roulers, Belgium, the Allies continue to make progress.

"Between Soissons and Berry-au-Bac artillery engagements have resulted in the destruction of several more of the enemy's batteries.

"East of Nancy the French have resumed the offensive and driven the enemy across the frontier."

CORRESPONDENTS TELL OF THE STRUGGLE

Graphic descriptions of the struggle in West Flanders, where for the past ten days the troops of the Kaiser have been attempting to reach the Strait of Dover, are being received from the British war correspondents.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at the front, under date of last Sunday, says that he counted twenty-five hundred German bodies in the River Yser, which ran red with the blood of the soldiers who fell in the repeated charges across the river. He says that on Saturday night the Germans sacrificed five thousand men in gaining a temporary foothold which they were unable to retain.

BRITISH CHECK 250,000 GERMANS

The correspondent of the Times says that the most furious attack of the Germans along the line of the Yser was at Ypres, where the British during five critical days checked 250,000 Germans.

The enemy's artillery fire was terrible, says this correspondent. It churned up the entire field. It frequently buried dozens of soldiers in the trenches.

The German commanders, it is stated, had the Kaiser's personal orders that they must take the French ports along the English channel. The troops did the utmost that human beings could do. Under a fire that grilled their ranks and riddled them with a deadly hail, the Germans repeatedly crossed the Yser in charges made at night.

BAYONET CHARGE SCATTERS TEUTONS

At times they advanced within a few hundred yards of the British lines. Then the British charged with bayonets, says this correspondent, and the Germans broke and fled, firing over their shoulders.

Nevertheless the shrapnel fire of the Germans grew more intense and effective and the situation more and more critical for the British.

Sheer numbers seemed likely to overbear the British until last Friday reinforcements arrived. The Germans retired fifteen miles.
